

RESET

“Living in the unresolved”

RESET

Getting Started

Where are the places in your life that are notorious for making you wait?
(doctors office, etc.)

How would you rate yourself on the following scale

I'm calm when I wait

I can't stand waiting

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Going Deeper

Most of the time God doesn't seem to be on the same time schedule as we are. John Ortberg put it like this, “We are double espresso followers of a decaf God.”

How have you noticed the truth of that statement in your life?

There are three parts of goal setting. Two of them are easy.

The first is setting the goal. The last is reaching the goal. The third on is the hardest. It's the middle space between setting the goal and achieving the results. It's living in the unresolved.

- What area of your life are you living in the unresolved.
- What is the hardest aspect of living in the unresolved for you?

Can you relate to the following quote. “We wait in fear for a happy ending we cannot write. We wait for a not yet that feels like a not ever.” -Lewis Smedes

Take a moment to read the following verses and make some notes about what God has to say about living in the unresolved.

Hebrews 10:36-38

Romans 8:23-25

Psalm 27:13,14

Psalm 33:20,21

What are some lessons that you have learned from the waiting times in your life?

God does not care so much about where we are going, as who we are, when we get there. What are some areas of your life that you would like to work on while you are going through the unresolved issues of your life? Here are some suggestions

- I want to be a better communicator
- I want to not jump to disastrous conclusions
- I want to bring the calm to my unresolved situation
- I want to learn to be grateful in this day
- I want to be in a more solid place financially
- I want to develop a half full attitude

Take a few minutes to share any prayer requests and have someone close in prayer/

