A crucial conversation reading lesson

Husbands read these verses and say to their wives "submit"
Wives read these verses and say to their husbands, "love me better."

Parents read these verses and say to their kids, "Obey me."

Kid's read these verses and say to their parents, "Don't exasperate me."

A wife that submits to her husband is loved.

A husband that loves his wife is submitted to.

Children that obey their parents have parents that are not exasperated.

Parent's that aren't always frustrated and angry have children that obey them.

My prayer: Let my conversation be always full of grace, seasoned with salt, so that I may know how to answer everyone.
